Icebank accepts no liability for any damage which may arise directly or indirectly from using the bank's website, nor damage which may arise due to the fact that the website could not be used for a shorter or longer period of time, i.e. but not exclusively, the bank accepts no liability for any damage arising from user's lost investment opportunities.

Trading in financial instruments involves a high level of risk. Past performance is not necessarily indicative of future performance. Users of the Icebank website are encouraged to obtain general information on the nature of securities transactions, investments, tax issues and other matters connected to securities transactions from the bank's financial advisers.

Anybody requiring further information on the financial instruments discussed on the bank's website is requested to contact one of the financial advisers at Icebank. In individual cases it may prove impossible to conduct business with financial instruments about which information is published on the website and trading may be restricted to a specific group of investors.

The market value as contained in the customer's statement of financial instruments does not include commission or other costs incurred if these instruments are sold. In these statements "market price" is the most recent price and "market value" is the value of the financial instruments based on that price. On the transaction statements, "price" denotes the trading price of transactions and "value" denotes the trading value based thereon. The market price of financial instruments listed on the Iceland Stock Exchange is generally the last trading price on the stock market. If a considerable time has elapsed since the most recent trading, the most favourable bids are also taken into consideration when assessing market price. Icebank reserves the right to correct statements.
